Blanking enemy strong points at Schweinfurt, attacking 26 Marauders of the 17th group made it possible for the 42nd infantry division of the Seventh army to seize the city with virtually no opposition, the citation noted, "thus bringing to a more rapid conclusion the ultimate victory of the allies."

An aircraft crew chief with the group, Jenson has been overseas 30 months. He is authorized to wear the European Theater ribbon and six stars, the American Defense ribbon and the Distinguished Unit badge and cluster.

While overseas he served in the South Pacific area, participating in action on Marshall, Philippine Islands, Iwo Jima and Okinawa.

Edwin L. Kedrowski, truck driver, courageously delivered vitally needed gasoline to forward units. His exemplary conduct reflects great credit upon himself and the military forces of the United States."

The Tenth armored Tigers gained early fame as the first front-line defenders of Bastogne, the stunning black of the desperate German counter-offensive in the Ardennes. The division was the first in the Third army to invade Germany and the first to capture the major German city. They were the first on the western front to smash into the national redoubt, Hitler's vaunted inner mountain fortress, and the first division in the Seventh army to enter Austria. Operating under an identification blackout in four different sectors of the front the Tenth armored was called the "Ghost Division" by the bewildered German 82nd corps.

Just a Letter From Home

Monday, August 27, 1945
Wisconsin Rapids, Wis.

Dear Bud,

People hereabouts slowly are recovering from the elation of victory and are busy trying to get their feet on the ground. It still doesn't seem possible that the war is over for rounding up the widespread Japanese forces looked like an interminable job. Surrender did not seem to be in the cards. But the atomic bomb and Russia's entrance into the war changed all that. Now we are sinking our teeth into a task as important and complex as that of gearing up for war.

The changeover to peacetime pursuits poses many problems both for individuals and the nation as a whole and all are going to have to pull together just as we did after Pearl Harbor lest there be unnecessary hardship and confusion on the home front. Here in South Wood county, there will be little dislocation and trouble for most of our basic industries and occupations were diverted into the war effort with little disruption and the same holds as we enter upon this peacetime era.

Our main concern is to procure materials and find skilled workmen to implement building programs side-tracked by the war and, in common with the rest of the country, to get merchandise and other products back into the hands of the public.

One of our chief aims, naturally, is to welcome you back to the old home town when Uncle Sam gives you the word and see that you get started anew in good shape.

There is one thing we'd like to caution you about. Our first postwar project was fencing in the backyard. If you ever decide to build a fence—don't. It looks nice and all that. And it will keep the kid and dog corralled. But life is too short. As you may suspect, we have just had a joust with the post-hole digger. It won. I suggest that you just make yourself a permanent fox-hole and forget all about it. One first digs the post hole, trying not to strike water. One then sharpens one end of

While performing duties in a forward observer crew, their positions were subjected to an intense artillery bombardment and two members of the group were painfully wounded. After rendering first aid and directing their evacuation, he removed the radio from the wounded man's back, placed it on his own and continued to call for accurate fire on enemy positions. Private Habbeck's heroism and loyal devotion to duty reflect great credit on himself and the army of the United States."

Private Habbeck is now with the army of occupation stationed in Winterville, Czechoslovakia.

He has seen action at Saider and Aitape in New Guinea, and Leyte and Luzon in the Philippines. Port Edwards Must Wait for Dial System

D. G. Smart, manager of the Wood County Telephone company, in answer to several questions about the coming dial system of communication for the village of Port Edwards, stated today that there is still a considerable work to be done and it will be sometime before it is in operation.

He explained that work was begun on the new system in 1941 but, along with other civilian projects, had to be halted during the war. A number of phones equipped with dial drums have been received and installed but the central equipment has not yet been released. The manager advised Port Edwards residents that the phones with dial drums will continue to work in the same manner as before until the new system is in operation and he urged that they refrain from handling the dial units at this time.

Mr. Smart said that the new system would involve about 300 phones in Port Edwards when completed and declared that it would increase efficiency of service.

No definite plans for a dial system in the city of Wisconsin Rapids are contemplated at this time, Mr. Smart added.
