The Rev. Carl Wiese read the ceremony in the Plainfield Methodist church at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, June 27, at which Dorothy Marie Osterhaus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Osterhaus of Plainfield, became the bride of Harold Henry Prochnow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Prochnow of Wautoma. Wallace Velt of Wautoma accompanied the bride's sister, Mrs. Arleigh Dent as she sang "Because".

Fashioned of white silk chiffon, the bride's gown had a lace bodice, long sleeves and a full skirt that ended in a train. A seed pearl tiara held her three-quarter length veil with scalloped lace border. She carried white roses. Gowns of rose and yellow silk chiffon and lace were worn by her sister, Miss Ruth Osterhaus, maid of honor, and Miss Ruth Grantin of Chicago, bridesmaid. Pink and yellow carnations and roses made up their bouquets.

Gordon Osterhaus of Madison, a brother of the bride, was best man. The groomsmen were Garry Bohn. A reception followed in the church parlors, where 150 relatives and friends gathered to greet the couple and a five-thirty supper was served.

The bride, a graduate of the Plainfield high school and the Wausau County Normal, has been teaching in the county schools. Mr. Prochnow attended the Wautoma schools and is engaged in farming. They will reside near Wautoma.

WE, the WOMEN

BY RUTH MILLETT

I remember reading an article a long while back that said the way to break yourself of smoking was to break the chain of actions that led up to lighting a cigarette.

The author broke his cigarette habit by using all kinds of little tricks, like putting his cigarettes out of reach, putting a cigarette in his mouth and then not lighting it, etc. He said this system worked fine with the cigarette habit.

And now I'm wondering if it wouldn't work with the driving habit, too. If driving weren't a habit that has a terrific hold on us there wouldn't be so many cars on the streets and highways, when we all know good and well we shouldn't use our cars unless it is absolutely necessary.

But for years whenever we had an errand to do we walked out and jumped in the waiting family car, and whizzed away to do it.

OUR HABIT CAN BE BROKEN

Driving's as natural an American habit as lighting a cigarette. So maybe we had better try to break the chain of actions that leads up to backing our cars out of the garage.

For instance, when Papa puts the car in at night he might take the rear left wheel off and leave the car jacked up. That would make it tough for Mama to complete her habit of taking the car to the grocery.

Of course, Papa could just hide the keys—but that wouldn't be tough enough. We're all used to hunting for car keys.

Or we might make breaking the driving habit a cooperative undertaking—with a whole neighborhood working together. Instead of keeping your car in your own garage you might keep it in the Smith's garage—two blocks away. And let them keep their car in yours.

Then on a rainy morning instead of saying, "It's such bad weather I'll have to take the car today," you would say, "It's so rainy I guess I'll have to catch the bus. It's nearer than the car."

YOU CAN GIVE TIRES TO U. S.

There are all kinds of stunts that could be worked out for making it unhandy to use the family car. And if we had as much luck as the man who thought up the idea in regard to cigarettes—we might, in a little while, be willing to give Uncle Sam all five of our tires and go around saying smugly:

"No, we don't drive any more. We've gone on the 'wagon.'" Or maybe we would have to phrase it, "We've gone on the bike for the duration."
