HINTS FROM HELOISE —

Use Curtain Hooks For Fast Zipping

By HELOISE CRUSE

Dear Heloise:

As a mother who has had to zip and unzip the jackets of three small children many times a day, I finally got smart.

I put those metal shower curtain hooks on each zipper pull!

Now my three little tiddly-winks have no trouble at all zipping and unzipping their own jackets. Three or four little fingers can fit into the big loop and it gives them something to pull on.

The jackets can also be easily hung by this big ring, which saves wear and tear on them. Busy Mother

Dear Heloise:

I find that placing hot cooked potatoes in a large cooking spoon facilitates the peeling operation.

The spud rolls easily... so there are no burned fingers or fork stabs that usually break up the potato. Helpful Hannah

Dear Heloise:

Have trouble turning a belt right side out when sewing? Just sew two strings (as long as the belt) on the inside end corners as you make the belt. Then when ready, simply pull the strings up through the middle. It's all right side out.

The string is readily removed from the end seam. And even the corners have pulled out nice and tidy. M. S.

Dear Heloise:

I love to send birthday cards. So I use a 12-pocket shoe bag marked for each month of the year.

On the first of January, I get out my box of cards and date book and start addressing

All I have to do is check the contents of a pocket at the beginning of each month, taking out the card that needs to be sent in time to arrive. This way I never am rushed, nor do I forget anyone.

Dear Heloise:

This is how I clean my garage floor when snow is on the ground.

I scoop up some clean snow and throw it into the garage with a snow shovel. Then I take a push broom and sweep it all out before it melts. The snow works like a sponge, cleaning the floor just as if it were washed, and much faster with less mess.

"Right" Colors Those You Like

By VIVIAN BROWN AP Newsfeatures Writer

Do colors frustrate you? Do you have the feeling that you'd like to paint your home a wild color or put offbeat colors on your walls or furniture?

If you are afraid to take a fling with color, you are like millions of other people who are perplexed by color, says Harold Schwartz, Pittsburgh-born designer of interior furnishings who has studied art, sculpture, architecture and interior design here and abroad.

You can get over color fear by using only the colors you like, he explains.

"No one can ever go wrong, if he lets himself go in selecting colors that appeal to him — no matter how many. You go wrong only when you try to use colors that you think should be used.

"Sit down with swatches of colors and say 'I like this...this...this, as many as you like.' Now—they should look good, he says, unless you are color blind.

"One should never say, 'I like this color but it isn't fashionable.' Use it if you like it."

People are becoming braver about colors every day, he points out. Color combinations are accepted that one would have thought hideous a decade or so ago. Pink and red has become almost commonplace. Orange combined with shocking pink is a striking combination. Yellow, pink and orange are used together. Bright blues and vivid greens are popular. Brown and black are considered chic.

Schwartz has been surprised by color preferences in some areas of the world. In Paris, he was startled to find that home furnishings buyers prefer muddy colors.

He showed designs in rugs and matching bedspreads that he has made in Spain—vivid shocking pink and white and other bedspreads and rugs in the striking color combinations and designs for which he is known. The Parisians chose bronzes, purples and other deep tones.

Further north, they could not get the colors too brilliant. Sweden often is associated with pastels but Stockholm buyers selected the brightest colors he had to offer. Ditto to England which is often associated with conservative colors.

"Countries that do not have much sunlight want to bring it into furnishings. They like all the colors you can give them. Brussels and Amsterdam enjoy color and in Brussels they use rugs as table coverings, he explains.

Spain, unlike colorful travel posters advertising Flamenco dancers and bullfighters, prefers pastel and other soft colors and 18th Century design.

Schwartz has designed fabrics, lighting fixtures and is a well-known designer of furniture, credited with introducing the sculptured look, engineered storage and multi-purpose furniture.

While on a sabbatical in Spain more than a decade ago, he became interested in Spanish design, concentrating on bedspreads and rugs made on the Jacquard loom. His new interest began a trend to Mediterranean ideas in the United States. But that look has had it in his opinion.

His new designs are inspired by periods ranging from early Coptic to space age avant-garde. He has learned to do design tricks with the Jacquard loom so that his spreads have a sculptured-to-the-bed look. He worked on one design two and a half years.

He is often asked whether he is going out on a limb with strong colors and bold designs but they are snapped up right away, particularly by American buyers.

Substitute Meats On Market Will Not Replace Real Thing

Meatless meats made from the soybean are on the market today in the form of a textured vegetable protein, according to Rosemary Stare, consumer marketing specialist at the University of Wisconsin, but won't replace the real thing.

This substance can be used as the "meat" in soups, patties, gravies, pizzas, camper food, ground meat dishes and health foods and comes in chunk granular or strip form. It contains no waste and less than 1 per cent fat. It's dehydrated and will keep indefinitely without refrigeration.

Another new food product is a bacon-type crumble that's used as a convenience food for hotels, restaurants and institutions.

One bacon substitute that may be found at the grocery store, is a crispy item used as an ingredient in peanut butter. Also on test market is meatless turkey and imitation ham.

A soybean protein powder can be used by food manufacturers to enrich existing food and as a main ingredient in new foods, such as "meal-in-a-glass breakfasts," dry soup mixes, dietetic foods, and instant high-protein beverages.

Even though these foods contain the same nutritional value as meat, milk, eggs or other animal protein, they will probably never replace beef steak on our tables. Instead of competing with natural meat, the substitutes can serve special dietary needs, and variety to menus and satisfy those who for religious or other reasons eat no meat.

Hospitals, restaurants and the institutional trade may increase their use of meatless products because of preparation ease, nutrition, convenience and little waste. These new foods may even penetrate the retail market, not as a substitute for meat but as a completely new group of foods.
