

Story Of Oxygen Tent Drive In This County

With several complaints coming to the editor of pressure on the part of salesmen selling magazines this newspaper commenced an investigation. We looked back over our files and noted the content of the original notice sent in by the president of the Sheboygan County Council American Legion...

Mr. B.: I could give the names I suppose if these people had signed up, but they did not and called us to find out about it. That is one reason why I called you. I felt this thing if it is all in the open and up-grade then certainly there is no reason in the world why any of your representatives should use high pressure methods.

Mr. L.: Yes. Perhaps you would like to see one of them? They present that, or are instructed to present that to every one they call on.

To the Residents of Sheboygan County: "This letter will introduce Mr. ... an accredited representative of the Crowell-Collier Publishing company, whom we have asked to call and explain a plan which we believe will be of personal interest to you."

Mr. B.: When they go out to ask the people to do something or inform them they are going to do something, they should state the facts. Have you one of the letters that the salesmen carry with them?

Mr. L.: They don't need to. The best men we have are the ones where we can go over the territory and never have a complaint. Anybody who uses those tactics we certainly want to know about, because the company does not approve of anything of that kind.

Mr. B.: The company publishes what magazines? Mr. L.: Woman's Home Companion, American Magazine and Colliers, the national weekly. We don't want any misunderstanding of any kind and of course you remember the article that the local secretary put in here retracting some of the previous statements.

Mr. B.: I don't think it is fair to put the blame on the salesmen. They are afraid that they might not get all the donations. This way they have a receipt where they take the magazines and donations they have some trouble with. People reported that they gave a dollar or gave donations and the donations were not received.

Mr. B.: In other words, the representatives kept it? Mr. L.: That is why the organization felt that the best way was to cut them out. These orders have to go in to the company naturally, for the magazines, and the order duplicates with a receipt for the customer. That is torn out and given to the customer.

Mr. B.: How are the receipts issued? Mr. L.: In duplicate. We have a copy of every order taken in the county. We have the original which goes in to the company for the order, the second one goes to the customer as a receipt for the subscription and the third one stays in our book as a permanent record.

Mr. B.: The auxiliary has no copy of those subscriptions that you take? Mr. L.: They can see them at any time. We keep those so that if they want to see them they can. We furnish them with a statement at the end of every week telling how many we have sold, what each one is and how much money was collected and how much their commission is, and that is furnished to the president who signs and returns one and keeps one for a permanent record so when we are through they know exactly how much they have coming.

"Things To Come" Will Be Topic Of Speaker Tuesday

Dr. William Hale, who is to be the speaker at the annual banquet of the Association of Commerce next Tuesday night, Feb. 9, at Benedict's Heidelberg club on the subject "The Shape of Things to Come" has had a long record in connection with chemistry ever since his graduation from Miami university with an M. A. degree in 1897 and a Ph. D. in 1899.

He has taught chemistry abroad and has been connected with some of the leading educational institutions in this country, including the University of Chicago and the University of Michigan, where he was director of organic chemistry research.

Mr. B.: The company publishes what magazines? Mr. L.: Woman's Home Companion, American Magazine and Colliers, the national weekly. We don't want any misunderstanding of any kind and of course you remember the article that the local secretary put in here retracting some of the previous statements.

Mr. B.: What about this statement: "Your co-operation in helping to make this plan a success may possibly be the means of saving some human lives." With the statement in the letter, what objection would you have to taking donations if it is for assisting humanity?

Mr. L.: I don't imagine there would be any donations. Our people are instructed to tell them that they can't take donations because the letter says they cannot. In the first place we are doing this more or less all over the state. The organizations themselves were the ones who did not want the donations because they have had people in some instances who said they gave a dollar. We don't have any order for a dollar. If they did give a dollar we never got the money.

Mr. B.: Did the American Legion auxiliary say they would not accept donations? Mr. L.: Only in the letter. That is what they have in the letter. I believe when anyone calls them they tell them they are willing to take donations but in this particular campaign they are not taking them.

Mr. B.: In other words, that is the only way in which you come into a county to work? Mr. L.: Yes. These letters of course are furnished by the auxiliary. Each man has to carry one of them. If he does it the way he is supposed to, he presents the letter as an introduction and lets the person read the letter. That is what they are supposed to do.

Mr. B.: I don't think it is fair to put the blame on the salesmen. They are afraid that they might not get all the donations. This way they have a receipt where they take the magazines and donations they have some trouble with.

Mr. B.: In other words, the representatives kept it? Mr. L.: That is why the organization felt that the best way was to cut them out. These orders have to go in to the company naturally, for the magazines, and the order duplicates with a receipt for the customer.

Purchase Of Silver Is Hit By House Vote

Washington. — (UP)—The House today tentatively voted to stop treasury silver purchases after Rep. Emanuel Celler, D., N. Y., protested that their continuance would benefit "only 60,000 miners and pot-bellied mine-owners."

The vote came on an amendment to the $1,202,007,320 treasury-post office appropriation bill which would prohibit use of any treasury funds during the 1944 fiscal year— which starts July 1—for the purchase of silver under the 1934 or 1939 silver purchase acts.

The amendment— sponsored by Celler— was adopted tentatively 166 to 103 on a teller vote, with republicans lining up solidly behind it.

Celler told the house that under the silver purchase acts 3,000,000, 000 ounces of silver have been accumulated in government vaults at West Point, N. Y., where it is "useless and tarnishing."

Make It Fight "Silver is a slacker metal — I want to put silver in uniform and make it fight," Celler shouted.

He said continued government purchases of silver at an "artificial" price of 71.11 cents an ounce will benefit "only 60,000 miners and pot-bellied mine-owners in six or seven western states."

"It's about time to puncture those pot-bellies," he roared as the house applauded.

"Only a trickle" of government silver has been released for use in the war effort, Celler said.

Rep. Compton I. White, D., Ida., protested that 22,000 tons of treasury silver has been allocated for war uses, and asked angrily: "Do you call that a mere trickle?"

Celler said the 22,000 tons has only been "lend-leased" to industry and must be returned intact after the war.

"I want no strings attached to the use of this silver," he said.

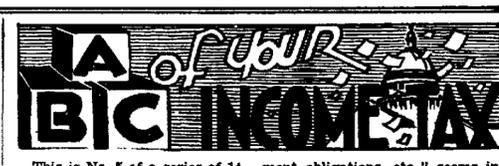

Rep. Francis Case, R., S. D., objected that "the amendment as drawn will not put silver in uniform," but would render the treasury stocks "perfectly sterile."

Celler's amendment originally stipulated that no treasury funds could be used for the transportation, storage, guarding, checking, or purchase of any silver, but it was subsequently limited on a motion by Rep. Jesse P. Wolcott, R., Mich., so as to apply only to silver purchases.

Celler admitted the amendment would not necessarily release any additional treasury silver for war uses.

This is No. 5 of a series of 14 articles prepared by a tax expert to assist the public in preparing Federal income tax returns. Clip the articles daily and save them for a complete reference when making out your tax form.

Under most circumstances dividends you receive on stock in a corporation must be reported here. Under some circumstances, however, the dividend may in reality be a distribution of capital which you paid into the corporation.

Dividends are not always paid in cash. If a dividend is paid in property, the fair market value of the property must be reported as income. If the dividend is in the form of the corporation's own stock, as frequently happens, a tax expert should be consulted as to whether the dividend must be reported, since the law is extremely confusing on this point.

If the dividend is in the form of stock of another corporation, fair market value must be reported as income.

Line 3 of form 1040 asks the amount of interest received during the taxable year on (a) "bank deposits, notes, etc."

Line 4 asks the amount of interest on corporate bonds, etc. When a bond is purchased for more than its face value, the excess is called a premium. A proportionate part of that premium may be deducted each year over the life of the bond.

After filling in Schedule (A), transfer totals on lines (h) and (i) to appropriate spaces in line 5 on the first page of your tax return form.
