he had read the Republican platform only once while he was en route here by plane and that "it represents my views."

Referring to Dewey's promise to gather young men around him, a reporter asked if that meant he would discharge Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

"You are asking me to pass on the mental vigor of Mr. Hull," Dewey replied. "I will not do that. I am not engaging in cabinet-picking at this time."

Throughout the conference Dewey repeatedly called reporters by their first names. It was "yes, Jim," and "what did you say, Charley," in those he did not know, he often said, "just a minute, this gentleman asked a question first."

Expresses Satisfaction

The nominee expressed satisfaction with the foreign trade plank of the party platform. While stating that some persons thought it might have been better, Dewey said it should be recognized that the platform was drawn by persons with conflicting opinions, and that as a result there had to be some compromising.

"This was totally an unbossed convention," he declared. "The delegates were free to reach their own decisions."

Parts of the foreign trade plank may appear at first blush to be inconsistent, he said, recalling that the plank promised an "adequate protective tariff" on competitive products designed to assure American standards.

"The essence of the plank is to be found in the latter part," Dewey said. "The party promises that this nation will work with other nations to promote greater trade. This is not inconsistent with the tariff part of be experienced in the task to be done and young enough to do it."

Against Dissension

The task of achieving a lasting peace, he declared, "is no task to be entrusted to stubborn men, grown old and tired and quarrelsome in office."

"It seems," he declared, "that the great men who founded this nation really knew what they were talking about when they said that three

Bricker Influence Democratic Choice For Vice President

Chicago (AP)—As the Republican national convention wound here today, there still were pl of political question marks but bigger than what effect the nomination of Gov. John W. Bricker vice president will have on Democratic nomination for the office.

Governor Bricker is a strong presidential nominee. His campaign for the presidential nomination is the only one in the party where policies have been on the line and a considerable portion of the United States covered.

The politicians who came here to Bricker were amazed at the strength he had, both in the hotel rooms and in the political among the delegates.

Regardless of who they name Democrats are going to have to some extra thought to their man.
