City Riot Exhausted

In one 30-minute period just before the curfew expired at dawn, state police exchanged fire with rooftop snipers in three separate incidents.

As daylight came, police still chased looters.

But with the end of the curfew at 6 p. m., traffic began flowing again. All cars had been banned on the city's streets for the curfew period. Vehicles were routed around the Springfield avenue section because of sporadic sniping.

Democratic Gov. Richard J. Hughes summoned additional guardsmen to quell what he called a "criminal insurrection." It reached a violent crescendo on a humid Friday night, as the darkness was pierced by gun flashes, searchlights and the flickering flames of buildings put to the torch by rioters.

Some 4,000 helmeted police with riot guns and guardsmen with bayonets at the ready cordoned off the Negro riot center, west of Newark's downtown business center. The quarantined area was widened when snipers and looters appeared outside the armed ring, penetrating sporadically even into the heart of the city.

With the curfew came a directive over the police radio: "Use your shotguns and revolvers. Use your shotguns and revolvers. That's what you have them for."

As Newark approached the dawn, her streets were littered with rubbish and broken glass, giving the appearance of a tornado-ravaged area. Acrid smoke still curled above the wreckage of Negro area buildings, after the arrest of a Negro taxicab driver touched off the rioting Wednesday night.

Among those who lost their lives in the rioting was a 10-year-old Negro boy, shot in the head. The white police victim was detective Fred Toto, 39, who was cited in 1964 for saving a youngster from drowning. The father of three, he caught a sniper's bullet near the heart.

All of the city's more than 1,000 firemen were on duty, and many answered calls in the riot section that exposed them to snipers on rooftops.

National Guardsmen counted only minor injuries to their ranks. Their Jeeps carried light machine guns. Armored personnel carriers were equipped with heavier ones. An unidentified private said they were under orders to use only the lighter weapons.

"This is like two countries fighting," said Sgt. Fred Schlueter, as he huddled out of the line of rioters' bullets. For some of the guardsmen it was a baptism of fire.

The adjacent communities of East Orange, Irvington, South Orange and Maplewood strengthened police details.
