Descent products of the second of the secon
Jesse Daniel Tillery           Lance Corporal. United States Marine Corps           NEWS RELEASES from the United States perparent of Defense No. 127.960 (MMED/MATR RELEASES) Definition (2003) (2004)	Arlington National Cemetery Website © 194-2011 Michael Robert Patterson - ALL Rights Reserved	WISCONSIN
Lance Corporal. United States Marine Corps  NEWS RELEASES from the Laties States Department of Defense No. 127-40 INMEDIATE RELEASE. Network of the Context: (700) 697-5132 Publichouts Provide States Department of Defense No. 127-40 INMEDIATE RELEASE. Network of Defense announced today the death of a Marine who was supporting Operation Ironj Freedom. Lance Corporal Jesse JD. They, 19, of Vesper, Visconin, died December 2, 2006, from sounds suffered while conducting combat peration in A Marine province, frainflery was sugged to 2ad Assaudt Anaphibian Battilao. Job Jatene Drisban, IMarine Experimentation in regard to this release the medic and contact the 2-2006, from younds suffered while conducting combat in Al Anhar province, frainflery was sugged to 2ad Assaudt Anaphibian Battilao. Job Jatene Drisban, IMarine Experimentation in regard to this release the medic and contact the 2-2006, from younds suffered whoring combat in Al Anhar province, frainflery was sugged to 2ad Assaudt Anaphibian Battilao. Job Jatene Drisban, IMarine Experimentation in regard to this release the medic and contact the 2-2006, from younds suffered during combat in Al Anhar province, frainflery was angle and the alter a vetram of two inor here, finally freinds say. Lance Corporal Jesse D. Tillery, 19, of Vesper, Weinsonis, in rould Wood Compt., the Said In Tree other commenting turther. The Rev. Milt Van Natta, paster and This chick with three other Marines when an acceleration and they should be remembered in our prayers. <sup>1</sup> He said hared is a vetram of the dense weeken and Jared Laren Harves Aray, "I think that's singertant because that we failing the failer States Defense and Jared Harves and Harve Aray," I' Haink that's singertant because this family is a sum the the this composition. Janes and Jared are in the Aray, '' Haink that's singertant because this family is a sum the there are estate and anay of the family. The Harves of the family from childing the release of the family. The said. I the said Jareed is a serving in 1706 Jane		(iii)
So. 122*66 INMEDIATE RELEASE Media Contact (708, 07*53 13007 -5132 Publichastry (709, 5428 -711       Image: Compared Particle Partin Particle Particle Particle Particle Particle Particle Particle		1848
Multic Contact: (2003) 807:5131097:5132         Dabl Identifies Marine Casualty         The Department of Defense announced today the death of a Marine who was supporting Operation Iraqi Freedon.         Lameet Corporal Jeses D. Tillery, 19, of Venger, Wisconsin, died December 2, 2006, from wounds suffered while conducting combart operations in Al-Marine Division II Marine Division. II Marine Division II Marine Di	No. 1227-06 IMMEDIATE RELEASE
The Department of Defense announced today the death of a Marine who was supporting Operation Irayi Freedom. Takes Corporal Jesse D, Tillery, 19, of Vesper, Wisconsin, died December 2, 2006, from wonnds suffered while conducting combat poperations in A Anhar province, frais Expeditionary Force, Camp Lejouw, North Carolina. The Determination in regard to this release the media can contact the 2nd Marine Division public affairs office at (910) 450-6575. S December 2000: A Wisconsin Marine killed in Iray was fase-intact with the military from childhood and had two brothers serving with the Army - one also on active dwy in Irag and the due ar veteran for too toors free, free, finally Fiched Sur in A Anhar province, the Penngano said in a statement Monday. Marrin Tillery, Jesse's futher, said the was told bus son was in a vehicle with three other Arenses when an accident happened. "We door' want to take attention away from the other crewmen the wree injured," he said. "Three other crewmen were injured who should be remembered in our proves." He said he was waiting for his children to return home before commenting further. The kev. Milt Van Natia, pastor and Tillery's South extend to the grant and Jareed are in the Army. "I think that's important because this family is sacrificing as much for this cause as any family I can think of," Van Natta said. "I like said Jareed is serving in Iraq, and James has served two terms and is due tog back next summer. James and Jared are in the Army. "I think that's important because this family to 2005 and you attends the University of Wisconsin-Eau Chilers, said he wat will be serving in Iraq. 2005 and you wattends the University of Wisconsin-Eau Chilers, said he and Jilery was basig and the Was sa grant grant grant and be prove grant. "I think that's says a lot fort time walways played like war gauges that he made yue," Hannel said, "The had a lot of was accompany the biosensin Rapids in 2005, Principal Gas Maneuso said, declining further comment unit Toesday.	Media Contact: (703) 697-5131/697-5132
Lance Corporal Jese D. Tillery, 19, of Vesper, Wisconsin, died December 2, 2006, from wounds suffered while conducting combat operations in A1 Anhar province, Iraq, Tillery was assigned to 2nd Assault Amphibian Battalion, 2nd Marine Division, II Marine Expeditionary proces, Camp Legienne, North Carolina,	DoD Identifies Marine Casualty operations in Al Anbar province, Irea, Tillery was assigned to 2nd Assault Amplibian Battalion, 2nd Marine Division, II Marine Expeditionary Force, Camp Lejuen, North Carolina. Can Marine Division, II Marine Expeditionary Force, Camp Lejuen, North Carolina, Can Marine Division, II Marine Expeditionary Force, Camp Lejuen, North Carolina, Can Marine Division, II Marine Expeditionary Force, Camp Lejuen, North Carolina, Can Marine Mile din Iraq and the other a veteran of two tours there, Iamily Irfends say. Lance Corporal Jesse D. Tillery, 19, of Vesper, Wiesonsin, in rurd Wood County, dief Saturday, Foon wounds suffered during combat in Al Anbar province, the Pentagon said in a statement Monday. Marin Tillery, Jesse's father, said he was told his son was in a vehicle with three other Marines when an accident happened. "We don't want to take attention away from the other crewmen that were injured." In said. "Three other crewmen were injured and the 'should be creenthered in our prayers." Meed on't want to take attention away from the other crewmen that were injured. Three other crewmen were injured and the 'should be creenthered in our prayers." The said he was waiting for his children to return home before commenting further. The Rev. Milt Van Natta, pastor and Tillery's Sunday school teacher at Baker Street Community Church, said Jesos had a sister, Joele, and two brothers, James and Jared. "I think that's important because this family is screfficing at much for this cause as any family I can thiot of." Van Natta said. "I think that's important because this family is excefficing at much for this cause as any family I can think of." Van Natta said. "I think that's important because this family is accord to sisting graduated from Lincoln High School in Wisconsin Rapids in 2005, Principal Gas Manceso said, declining further comment until Tuesy were best friends from the second to sisting graduated before basing tooth some shuin in hear yaras. "I think that says a lot about the character of the family." Tillery was a	The Department of Defense announced today the death of a Marine who was supporting Operation Iraqi Freedom.
10 December 2006:         A Wisconsin Marine killed in Iraq was fascitated with the editrary from to tours there, family friends say.         Lance Corporal Jesse D. Tilery, 19, of Veper, Wisconsin, in rural Wood County, died Saturday from wounds suffered during combat in Al Anbar province, the Pentagon said in a statement Monday.         Martin Tillery, Jesse's father, said he was told his on was in a vehicle with three other Marines when an accident happened.         "We don't want to take attention away from the other crewmen that were injured," he said. "Three other crewmen were injured and they should be remembered in our prayers."         The Rev. Milt Van Natta, pastor and Tillery's Sonday school teacher at Baker Street Community Church, said Jesse had a sister, Joelle, and two brothers, James and Jared.         He said Jared is serving in Iraq, and James has served two terms and is due to go back next summer. James and Jared are in the Army.         "I think that's important because this family is sacrificing as much for this cause as any family I can think of." Van Natta said. "I think that simportant because this family is sacrificing as much for this cause as any family I can think of." Van Natta said. "I think that's important because this family is sacrificing as much for this cause as any family I can think of." Van Natta said. "I think that's important because the family is sacrificing as much for this cause as any family I can think of." Van Natta said. "I think that's important because the same at goad go one you got to know him." he said.         If there, graduated from Lincohn In 2005 and now attends the University of Wisconsin-Eau Chaine, said he and Tillery were best friends from the scond to six thy grade before losing tock sontheres and and." The had a	operations in Al Anbar province, Iraq. Tillery was assigned to 2nd Assault Amphibian Battalion, 2nd Marine Division, II Marine
A Wisconsin Marine killed in Iraq was fascinated with the military from childhood and had two brothers serving with the Army - one also on active duty in Iraq and the other a veteran of two tours there, family friends say. Lance Corporal Jesse D. Tillery, 19, of Vesper, Wisconsin, in rural Wood County, died Saturday from wounds suffered during combat. Martin Tillery, Jesse's father, said he was told his son was in a vehicle with three other Marines when an accident happened. "We don't want to take attention away from the other crewmen that were injured." he said. "Three other crewmen were injured and they should be remembered in our prayers." He said he was waiting for bis children to return home before commenting further. The Rev. Milt Van Natta, pastor and Tillery's Sonday school teacher at Baker Street Community Church, said Jesse had a sister, Joelle, and two brothers, James and Jared. We ada't want to take attention away from the other crewmen that were injured. "In said. "Three other character of the family." The test Milt Van Natta, pastor and Tillery's Sonday school teacher at Baker Street Community Church, said Jesse had a sister, Joelle, and two brothers, James and Jared. We ada't want to be availed from Lincoln Ii Mary as a lot about the character of the family." They graduated from Lincoln Ii My Sostrifteing as much for this cause as any family 1 can think of," Van Natta said. "I think that's important because this family is in 2005, Principal Gas Mancuso said, declining further comment mili Tuesday. "I there, they we be strined from Lincoln in 2005 and now attends the University of Wisconsin-Eau Chaire, said he and Titlery were best friends from the weaton to sing marke the inducen spectra character of the family." Staff Sergeant Timothy Edwards, a spekemman an Camp Legune, but this magnation and made up new games. "I' to as his dream to go in the military," he said. "I' hand is a staff. Tillery, who was single, jained the Tak alth Tillery and was deployed to Iraq in Sergeant Timothy Edwards, a spe	For further information in regard to this release the media can contact the 2nd Marine Division public affairs office at (910) 450-6575.
also on active duty in Iraq and the other a 'eteran of two tours there, family friends say." Lance Corporal Jesse D. Tillery, 19, of Vesper, Wisconsin, in rural Wood County, died Saturday from wounds suffered during combat in Al Anhar province, the Pentamegon said in a statement Monday. Martin Tillery, Jesse's father, said he was told his son was in a vehicle with three other Marines when an accident happened. "We don't want to take attention away from the other crewmen that were injured," he said. "Three other crewmen were injured and they should be remembered in our prayers." He said he was walting for his children to return home before commenting further. The Rev. Milt Van Natta, pastor and Tillery's Stundy school teacher at Baker Street Community Church, said Jesse had a sister, Joelle, and two brothers, James and Jared. He said Jared is serving in Iraq, and James has served two terms and is due to go back next summer. James and Jared are in the Army. "I think that's important because this family is sacrificing as much for this cause as any family I can think of," Van Natta said. "I think that's important because this family is sacrificing as much for this cause as any family I can think of," Van Natta said. "I think that's important because this family is sacrificing as much for this cause as any family I can think of," Van Natta said. "I think that's important because this family is acciding three days played like warg game that he made up." Tillery were best friends from the second to sixth grades before losing touch somewhat in later years. "I just knew that he was a great guy once you got to know him," he said. Tillery was assigned to 2nd Assault Amphibian Batalian, 2nd Marine Division, II Marine Expeditionary Force, Camp Lejeume, North Carolina. Staff Sergeant Timothy Edwards, a spokesman at Camp Lejeume, sidt Tillery joined the Marines in August 2005 and was a crewman on an amphibious assault whelle. Tillery, was wais die, oficient be ald Batalion in February and was deplayed to Iraq in September, Ed	5 December 2006:
in Al Anbar province, the Pentagon said in a statement Monday. Martin Tillery, Jesse's father, said he was told his son was in a vehicle with three other Marines when an accident happened. "We don't want to take attention away from the other crewmen that were injured," he said. "Three other crewmen were injured and they should be remembered in our prayers." He said he was waiting for his children to return home before commenting further. The Rev. Milt Van Natta, pastor and Tillery's Sunday school teacher at Baker Street Community Church, said Jesse had a sister, Joelle, and two brothers, James and Jared. He said Jared is serving in Iraq, and James has served two terms and is due to go back next summer. James and Jared are in the Army. "I think that's important because this family is sacrificing as much for this cause as any family I can think of," Van Natta said. "I think that says a lot about the character of the family." Tillery graduated from Lincoln High School in Wisconsin Fauptie in 2008, Principal Gus Mancuso said, declining further comment until Tuesday. "Jyter Hamel, 19, who also graduated from Lincoln in 2005 and now attends the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire, said he and Tillery use test friends from the second to sixth grades before losing touch somewhat in later years. "I just knew that he was a great gay once you got to know him," he said. In their grade-school yeas, "most of the time we always played like war games that he made up," Hamel said. "He had a lot of war action figurines and stuff. He d always have this imagination and made up new games. "It was his dream to go in the military," he said. Tillery was assigned to 2nd Assault Amphibian Battalion, 2nd Marine Division, II Marine Expeditionary Force, Camp Lejeune, North Carolina. Staff Sergeant Timothy Edwards, a spokesman at Camp Lejeune, said Tillery joined the Marines in August 2005 and was a crewman on an amphibious assault vehicle. Tillery, who was single, joined the 2nd Battalion in February and was deployed t
<ul> <li>"We don't want to take attention away from the other crewmen that were injured," he said. "Three other crewmen were injured and they should be remembered in our prayers."</li> <li>"He said he was waiting for his children to return home before commenting further.</li> <li>The Rev. Milt Van Natta, pastor and Tillery's Sunday school teacher at Baker Street Community Church, said Jesse had a sister, Joelle, and two brothers, James and Jared.</li> <li>He said Jared is serving in Iraq, and James has served two terms and is due to go back next summer. James and Jared are in the Army.</li> <li>"I think that's important because this family is scerificing as much for this cause as any family I can think of," Van Natta said. "I think that's important because this family is scerificing as much for this cause as any family I can think of," Van Natta said. "I think that's important because this family is scerificing as much for this cause as any family I can think of," Van Natta said. "I think that's important because this from the scool in 2005, Principal Gus Mancuso said, declining further comment until Tuesday.</li> <li>Tyler Hamel, 19, who also graduated from Lincoln in 2005 and now attends the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire, said he and Tillery were best friends from the second to sixth grades before losing touch somewhat in later years.</li> <li>"I just knew that he was a great guy once you got to know him," he said.</li> <li>In their grade-school years, "most of the time we always played like war games that he made up," Hamel said. "He had a lot of war action figurines and shift. He d'always have this imagination and made up new games.</li> <li>Staff Sergeant Timothy Edwards, a spokesman at Camp Lejeune, said Tillery joined the Marines in August 2005 and was a crewman on an amphibious assault veikle. Tillery, who was single, joined the 240 Batatilon in February and was deployed to Iraq in September, Edwards said.</li> <li>Tyler Hamel's father, Dave Hamel of Wisconsin Rapids, remembered Tillery as the poli</li></ul>		V
they should be remembered in our prayers." He said he was waiting for his children to return home before commenting further. The Rev. Milt Van Natta, pastor and Tillery's Sunday school teacher at Baker Street Community Church, said Jesse had a sister, Joelle, and two brothers, James and Jared. He said Jared is serving in Iraq, and James has served two terms and is due to go back next summer. James and Jared are in the Army. "I think that's important because this family is sacrificing as much for this cause as any family I can think of," Van Natta said. "I think that's important because this family is sacrificing as much for this cause as any family I can think of," Van Natta said. "I think that's important because this family is sacrificing as much for this cause as any family I can think of," Van Natta said. "I think that's important because this family is sacrificing as much character of the family." Tillery graduated from Lincoln High School in Wisconsin Rapids in 2005, Principal Gus Mancuso said, declining further comment until Tuesday. Tyler Hamel, 19, who also graduated from Lincoln in 2005 and now attends the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire, said he and Tillery were best friends from the second to sixth grades before losing touch somewhat in later years. "I just knew that he was a great guy once you got to know him," he said. In their grade-school years, "most of the time we always played like war games that he made up," Hamel said. "He had a lot of war action figurines and ships and staff. He'd always have this immignation and made up new games. "It was his dream to go in the military," he said. Tillery was assigned to 2nd Assault Amphibian Battalion, 2nd Marine Division, II Marine Expeditionary Force, Camp Lejeune, North Carolina. Staff Sergeant Timothy Edwards, a spokesman at Camp Lejeune, said Tillery joined the Marines in Augus 2005 and was a crewman on an amphibious assault vehice. Tillery, who was single, joined the 2nd Battalion in February and was deployed to Iraq in Sep	Martin Tillery, Jesse's father, said he was told his son was in a vehicle with three other Marines when an accident happened.
The Rev. Milt Van Natta, pastor and Tillery's Sunday school teacher at Baker Street Community Church, said Jesse had a sister, Joelle, and two brothers, James and Jared. He said Jared is serving in Iraq, and James has served two terms and is due to go back next summer. James and Jared are in the Army. "I think that's important because this family is sacrificing as much for this cause as any family I can think of," Van Natta said. "I think that says a lot about the character of the family." Tillery graduated from Lincoln High School in Wisconsin Rapids in 2005, Principal Gus Mancuso said, declining further comment until Tuesday. Tyler Hamel, 19, who also graduated from Lincoln in 2005 and now attends the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire, said he and Tillery were best friends from the second to sixth grades before losing touch somewhat in later years. "I just knew that he was a great guy once you got to know him," he said. In their grade-school years, "most of the time we always played like war games that he made up," Hamel said. "He had a lot of war action figurines and ships and stuff. He'd always have this imagination and made up new games. "I't was his dream to go in the military," he said. Tillery was assigned to 2nd Assault Amphibian Battalion, 2nd Marine Division, II Marine Expeditionary Force, Camp Lejeune, North Carolina. Staff Sergeant Timothy Edwards, a spokesman at Camp Lejeune, said Tillery joined the Marines in August 2005 and was a crewman on an amphibious assault vehicle. Tillery, who was single, joined the 2nd Battalion in February and was deployed to Iraq in September, Edwards said. Tyler Hamel's father, Dave Hamel of Wisconsin Rapids, remembered Tillery as the polite, conscientious youth he hired to help plant some trees and oh aying on his farm when Tillery was just entering high school. He talked to Tillery again later when he was about to graduate. Tillery, whose father is a truck driver, was 'Kind of quiet'' but really polite, Hamel said. "He called me 'Mr. Hamel.' He was reall
Joelle, and two brothers, James and Jared. He said Jared is serving in Iraq, and James has served two terms and is due to go back next summer. James and Jared are in the Army. "I think that's important because this family is sacrificing as much for this cause as any family I can think of," Van Natta said. "I think that says a lot about the character of the family." Tillery graduated from Lincoln High School in Wisconsin Rapids in 2005, Principal Gus Mancuso said, declining further comment until Tuesday. Tyler Hamel, 19, who also graduated from Lincoln in 2005 and now attends the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire, said he and Tillery were best friends from the second to sixth grades before losing touch somewhat in later years. "I just knew that he was a great guy once you got to know him," he said. In their grade-school years, "most of the time we always played like war games that he made up, "Hamel said. "He had a lot of war action figurines and ships and stuff. He'd always have this imagination and made up new games. "It was his dream to go in the military," he said. Tillery was assigned to 2nd Assault Amphibian Battalion, 2nd Marine Division, II Marine Expeditionary Force, Camp Lejeune, North Carolina. Staff Sergeant Timothy Edwards, a spokesman at Camp Lejeune, said Tillery joined the Marines in August 2005 and was a crewman on an amphibious assault vehicle. Tillery, who was single, joined the 2nd Battalion in February and was deployed to Iraq in September, Edwards said. "His unit is working in conjunction with Iraqi forces," Edwards said. Tyler Hamel's father, Dave Hamel of Wisconsin Rapids, remembered Tillery as the polite, conscientious youth he hired to help plant some trees and do haying on his farm when Tillery was just entering high school. He talked to Tillery again later when he was about to graduate. Tillery, whose father is a truck driver, was "kind of quiet" but really polite, Hamel said. "He called me 'Mr. Hamel.' He was really very polite compared to a lot of kids his ag	He said he was waiting for his children to return home before commenting further.
Army. "I think that's important because this family is sacrificing as much for this cause as any family I can think of," Van Natta said. "I think that says a lot about the character of the family." Tillery graduated from Lincoln High School in Wisconsin Rapids in 2005, Principal Gus Mancuso said, declining further comment until Tuesday. Tyler Hamel, 19, who also graduated from Lincoln in 2005 and now attends the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire, said he and Tillery were best friends from the second to sixth grades before losing touch somewhat in later years. "I just knew that he was a great guy once you got to know him," he said. In their grade-school years, "most of the time we always played like war games that he made up," Hamel said. "He had a lot of war action figurines and ships and stuff. He'd always have this imagination and made up new games. "It was his dream to go in the military," he said. Tillery was assigned to 2nd Assault Amphibian Battalion, 2nd Marine Division, II Marine Expeditionary Force, Camp Lejeune, North Carolina. Staff Sergeant Timothy Edwards, a spokesman at Camp Lejeune, said Tillery joined the Marines in August 2005 and was a crewman on an amphibious assault vehicle. Tillery, who was single, joined the 2nd Battalion in February and was deployed to Iraq in September, Edwards said. Tyler Hamel's father, Dave Hamel of Wisconsin Rapids, remembered Tillery as the polite, conscientious youth he hired to help plant some trees and do haying on his farm when Tillery was just entering high school. He talked to Tillery again later when he was about to graduate. Tillery is the 63rd Marine or soldier from Wisconsin to die in Iraq since U.S. troops invaded the country in March 2003 to topple President Saddam Hussein.
think that says a lot about the character of the family." Tillery graduated from Lincoln High School in Wisconsin Rapids in 2005, Principal Gus Mancuso said, declining further comment until Tuesday. Tyler Hamel, 19, who also graduated from Lincoln in 2005 and now attends the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire, said he and Tillery were best friends from the second to sixth grades before losing touch somewhat in later years. ''I just knew that he was a great guy once you got to know him,'' he said. In their grade-school years, 'most of the time we always played like war games that he made up,'' Hamel said. ''He had a lot of war action figurines and ships and stuff. He'd always have this imagination and made up new games. ''I twas his dream to go in the military,'' he said. Tillery was assigned to 2nd Assault Amphibian Battalion, 2nd Marine Division, II Marine Expeditionary Force, Camp Lejeune, North Carolina. Staff Sergeant Timothy Edwards, a spokesman at Camp Lejeune, said Tillery joined the Marines in August 2005 and was a crewman on an amphibious assault vehicle. Tillery, who was single, joined the 2nd Battalion in February and was deployed to Iraq in September, Edwards said. Tyler Hamel's father, Dave Hamel of Wisconsin Rapids, remembered Tillery as the polite, conscientious youth he hired to help plant some trees and do haying on his farm when Tillery was just entering high school. He talked to Tillery again later when he was about to graduate. Tillery, whose father is a truck driver, was ''kind of quiet'' but really polite, Hamel said. ''He called me 'Mr. Hamel.' He was really very polite compared to a lot of kids his age.'' Tillery is the 63rd Marine or soldier from Wisconsin to die in Iraq since U.S. troops invaded the country in March 2003 to topple President Saddam Hussein.
until Tuesday. Tyler Hamel, 19, who also graduated from Lincoln in 2005 and now attends the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire, said he and Tillery were best friends from the second to sixth grades before losing touch somewhat in later years. "I just knew that he was a great guy once you got to know him," he said. In their grade-school years, "most of the time we always played like war games that he made up," Hamel said. "He had a lot of war action figurines and ships and stuff. He'd always have this imagination and made up new games. "It was his dream to go in the military," he said. Tillery was assigned to 2nd Assault Amphibian Battalion, 2nd Marine Division, II Marine Expeditionary Force, Camp Lejeune, North Carolina. Staff Sergeant Timothy Edwards, a spokesman at Camp Lejeune, said Tillery joined the Marines in August 2005 and was a crewman on an amphibious assault vehicle. Tillery, who was single, joined the 2nd Battalion in February and was deployed to Iraq in September, Edwards said. Tyler Hamel's father, Dave Hamel of Wisconsin Rapids, remembered Tillery as the polite, conscientious youth he hired to help plant some trees and do haying on his farm when Tillery was just entering high school. He talked to Tillery again later when he was about to graduate. Tillery, whose father is a truck driver, was "kind of quiet" but really polite, Hamel said. "He called me 'Mr. Hamel.' He was really very polite compared to a lot of kids his age." Tillery is the 63rd Marine or soldier from Wisconsin to die in Iraq since U.S. troops invaded the country in March 2003 to topple President Saddam Hussein.
Tillery were best friends from the second to sixth grades before losing touch somewhat in later years. "I just knew that he was a great guy once you got to know him," he said. In their grade-school years, "most of the time we always played like war games that he made up," Hamel said. "He had a lot of war action figurines and ships and stuff. He'd always have this imagination and made up new games. "It was his dream to go in the military," he said. Tillery was assigned to 2nd Assault Amphibian Battalion, 2nd Marine Division, II Marine Expeditionary Force, Camp Lejeune, North Carolina. Staff Sergeant Timothy Edwards, a spokesman at Camp Lejeune, said Tillery joined the Marines in August 2005 and was a crewman on an amphibious assault vehicle. Tillery, who was single, joined the 2nd Battalion in February and was deployed to Iraq in September, Edwards said. "His unit is working in conjunction with Iraqi forces," Edwards said. Tyler Hamel's father, Dave Hamel of Wisconsin Rapids, remembered Tillery as the polite, conscientious youth he hired to help plant some trees and do haying on his farm when Tillery was just entering high school. He talked to Tillery again later when he was about to graduate. Tillery, whose father is a truck driver, was "kind of quiet" but really polite, Hamel said. "He called me 'Mr. Hamel.' He was really very polite compared to a lot of kids his age." Tillery is the 63rd Marine or soldier from Wisconsin to die in Iraq since U.S. troops invaded the country in March 2003 to topple President Saddam Hussein.
In their grade-school years, "most of the time we always played like war games that he made up," Hamel said. "He had a lot of war action figurines and ships and stuff. He'd always have this imagination and made up new games. "It was his dream to go in the military," he said. Tillery was assigned to 2nd Assault Amphibian Battalion, 2nd Marine Division, II Marine Expeditionary Force, Camp Lejeune, North Carolina. Staff Sergeant Timothy Edwards, a spokesman at Camp Lejeune, said Tillery joined the Marines in August 2005 and was a crewman on an amphibious assault vehicle. Tillery, who was single, joined the 2nd Battalion in February and was deployed to Iraq in September, Edwards said. "His unit is working in conjunction with Iraqi forces," Edwards said. Tyler Hamel's father, Dave Hamel of Wisconsin Rapids, remembered Tillery as the polite, conscientious youth he hired to help plant some trees and do haying on his farm when Tillery was just entering high school. He talked to Tillery again later when he was about to graduate. Tillery, whose father is a truck driver, was "kind of quiet" but really polite, Hamel said. "He called me 'Mr. Hamel.' He was really very polite compared to a lot of kids his age." Tillery is the 63rd Marine or soldier from Wisconsin to die in Iraq since U.S. troops invaded the country in March 2003 to topple President Saddam Hussein.
action figurines and ships and stuff. He'd always have this imagination and made up new games. "It was his dream to go in the military," he said. Tillery was assigned to 2nd Assault Amphibian Battalion, 2nd Marine Division, II Marine Expeditionary Force, Camp Lejeune, North Carolina. Staff Sergeant Timothy Edwards, a spokesman at Camp Lejeune, said Tillery joined the Marines in August 2005 and was a crewman on an amphibious assault vehicle. Tillery, who was single, joined the 2nd Battalion in February and was deployed to Iraq in September, Edwards said. "His unit is working in conjunction with Iraqi forces," Edwards said. Tyler Hamel's father, Dave Hamel of Wisconsin Rapids, remembered Tillery as the polite, conscientious youth he hired to help plant some trees and do haying on his farm when Tillery was just entering high school. He talked to Tillery again later when he was about to graduate. Tillery, whose father is a truck driver, was "kind of quiet" but really polite, Hamel said. "He called me 'Mr. Hamel.' He was really very polite compared to a lot of kids his age." Tillery is the 63rd Marine or soldier from Wisconsin to die in Iraq since U.S. troops invaded the country in March 2003 to topple President Saddam Hussein.	"I just knew that he was a great guy once you got to know him," he said.
Tillery was assigned to 2nd Assault Amphibian Battalion, 2nd Marine Division, II Marine Expeditionary Force, Camp Lejeune, North Carolina. Staff Sergeant Timothy Edwards, a spokesman at Camp Lejeune, said Tillery joined the Marines in August 2005 and was a crewman on an amphibious assault vehicle. Tillery, who was single, joined the 2nd Battalion in February and was deployed to Iraq in September, Edwards said. ''His unit is working in conjunction with Iraqi forces,'' Edwards said. Tyler Hamel's father, Dave Hamel of Wisconsin Rapids, remembered Tillery as the polite, conscientious youth he hired to help plant some trees and do haying on his farm when Tillery was just entering high school. He talked to Tillery again later when he was about to graduate. Tillery, whose father is a truck driver, was ''kind of quiet'' but really polite, Hamel said. ''He called me 'Mr. Hamel.' He was really very polite compared to a lot of kids his age.'' Tillery is the 63rd Marine or soldier from Wisconsin to die in Iraq since U.S. troops invaded the country in March 2003 to topple President Saddam Hussein.
Carolina. Staff Sergeant Timothy Edwards, a spokesman at Camp Lejeune, said Tillery joined the Marines in August 2005 and was a crewman on an amphibious assault vehicle. Tillery, who was single, joined the 2nd Battalion in February and was deployed to Iraq in September, Edwards said. ''His unit is working in conjunction with Iraqi forces,'' Edwards said. Tyler Hamel's father, Dave Hamel of Wisconsin Rapids, remembered Tillery as the polite, conscientious youth he hired to help plant some trees and do haying on his farm when Tillery was just entering high school. He talked to Tillery again later when he was about to graduate. Tillery, whose father is a truck driver, was "kind of quiet" but really polite, Hamel said. "He called me 'Mr. Hamel.' He was really very polite compared to a lot of kids his age." Tillery is the 63rd Marine or soldier from Wisconsin to die in Iraq since U.S. troops invaded the country in March 2003 to topple President Saddam Hussein.	"It was his dream to go in the military," he said.
on an amphibious assault vehicle. Tillery, who was single, joined the 2nd Battalion in February and was deployed to Iraq in September, Edwards said. ''His unit is working in conjunction with Iraqi forces,'' Edwards said. Tyler Hamel's father, Dave Hamel of Wisconsin Rapids, remembered Tillery as the polite, conscientious youth he hired to help plant some trees and do haying on his farm when Tillery was just entering high school. He talked to Tillery again later when he was about to graduate. Tillery, whose father is a truck driver, was ''kind of quiet'' but really polite, Hamel said. ''He called me 'Mr. Hamel.' He was really very polite compared to a lot of kids his age.'' Tillery is the 63rd Marine or soldier from Wisconsin to die in Iraq since U.S. troops invaded the country in March 2003 to topple President Saddam Hussein.
Tyler Hamel's father, Dave Hamel of Wisconsin Rapids, remembered Tillery as the polite, conscientious youth he hired to help plant some trees and do haying on his farm when Tillery was just entering high school. He talked to Tillery again later when he was about to graduate. Tillery, whose father is a truck driver, was "kind of quiet" but really polite, Hamel said. "He called me 'Mr. Hamel.' He was really very polite compared to a lot of kids his age." Tillery is the 63rd Marine or soldier from Wisconsin to die in Iraq since U.S. troops invaded the country in March 2003 to topple President Saddam Hussein.	on an amphibious assault vehicle. Tillery, who was single, joined the 2nd Battalion in February and was deployed to Iraq in some trees and do having on his farm when Tillery was just entering high school. He talked to Tillery again later when he was about to graduate. Tillery, whose father is a truck driver, was "kind of quiet" but really polite, Hamel said. "He called me 'Mr. Hamel.' He was really very polite compared to a lot of kids his age." Tillery is the 63rd Marine or soldier from Wisconsin to die in Iraq since U.S. troops invaded the country in March 2003 to topple President Saddam Hussein.	"His unit is working in conjunction with Iraqi forces," Edwards said.
very polite compared to a lot of kids his age." Tillery is the 63rd Marine or soldier from Wisconsin to die in Iraq since U.S. troops invaded the country in March 2003 to topple President Saddam Hussein.	some trees and do having on his farm when Tillery was just entering high school. He talked to Tillery again later when he was about to President Saddam Hussein.
8 December 2006:
	8 December 2006:

Webmaster: Michael Robert Patterson

Posted: 13 December 2006 Updated: 1 January 2007 Updated: 4 February 2007 Updated: 25 March 2008 Updated: 12 December 2008

Photo Courtesy of Holly, February 2007

Photo Courtesy of Holly, January 2007