AS ALLIES PREPARED TO TAKE NAPLES—Under cover of a smoke screen, U. S. Rangers advanced up a hillside near the tiny Italian village of Maiori, northwest of Salerno. The Rangers were landed at Maiori with the Fifth army to clear the Germans from the hills overlooking the plains of Naples.

Allies Continue Successes From Europe Around to the Solomons

Cpl. Ellsworth S. Primeau, formerly of this city, who was stationed at Camp Williams army air force, Camp Douglas, Wis., for the summer, has been transferred to Camp Kearns army air base, Salt Lake City, Utah. On October 9, he will report to the New Amsterdam theatre, New York City, to take part in the army air forces show under the direction of Moss Hart.

The show will open in Boston November 16 for a two-weeks' try-out, then will proceed to Washington, D. C. for a week. During Thanksgiving week it will open in New York City and will run through December 31. At the completion of its New York run it will be made into a movie by a major Hollywood studio. The show is for the benefit of army emergency relief, as was "This Is the Army."

The promotion of 2nd Lt. Edward Z. Palay, son of S. W. Palay, 520 Eighth avenue south, to the grade of first lieutenant was announced recently by headquarters, Panama Canal department, Caribbean defense command.

Lt. Palay, who enlisted in the air forces in March, 1942, after attending Marquette university, is now serving as an aerial observer with a reconnaissance squadron in the Canal Zone.

Pfc. William M. Papke, son of Mrs. Meda Papke, 186 Second street north, has been promoted to the grade of corporal. Cpl. Papke is taking bombardier training at Midland army air field, Texas.

Norbert J. Benkowski, son of Joe Benkowski, 1851 Fifth avenue north, has completed his course as an aviation mechanic at Armarillo, Tex., and will now be transferred to some air base where he will service Flying Fortresses.

Sgt. Robert R. Robinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Robinson, 431 Seventh avenue south, graduated recently from the flexible gunnery school at Kingman, Arizona.

A-C Harold J. Gazeley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gazeley, 340 Ninth street south, has completed primary training at Albany, Georgia, and is now stationed at Greenwood army air field, Miss., for basic training.

Victor F. Baldwin, seaman 2nd class, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis F. Baldwin, 131 Sixteenth avenue south, is now stationed at the naval air technical training center at Memphis, Tenn., having completed his boot training at Great Lakes, Ill., about a month ago.

Success marched with the allied global offensive over the week-end, from Europe clear around to the central Solomons, the most important operation being the continuance of the fierce Russian attacks in several strategic sectors of the long eastern front despite the terrific impediment of the autumn rains and mud.

This sensational drive has as its main objective the capture of strategic Nazi strong-points which will be essential for the Soviet armies when they launch their all-out winter offensive. Indeed, if dame fortune should succumb to the blandishments of such amazing stamina and elan as the Russians are displaying, the winter drive might continue out of the summer offensive which by all rules of the game should now be finished.

However, a development of that sort would mean a collapse of the present German line—a chicken which we aren't warranted in counting, at least before its shell is cracked. Suffice it for the moment to note with satisfaction that the Muscovites have the power to undertake these additional operations while the enemy is still disorganized from the great retreat to the Dnieper.

There's another highly important reason, or so it strikes me, why the reds are thus extending themselves. The Hitlerites can't be allowed a respite in which to pull themselves together and consolidate their new positions after the beating they have sustained.

One wonders whether the Russians, in undertaking this fresh task, are inspired by expectation of an allied invasion of western Europe in the not distant future—or a distraction in some other theater—which would force Hitler to weaken his battle-line in Russia. Lieutenant General Ira C. Baker, commander of the United States Eighth airforce, based in England, yesterday predicted an allied invasion of Germany "across the English channel and the North sea," though he gave no indication of when such a drive might be launched. However, American and British bomber fleets are hammering Hitler's fortresses in great strength, thereby rendering support to the Russian operations.

The state public service commission will hold a public hearing in the city hall at Wausau at 9 a. m. on Thursday October 21, 1942, to consider several applications for licenses to operate as contract motor carriers.

William Obermeier, 721 Eighth street north, has applied for a license to carry household goods within a radius of 100 miles of Wisconsin Rapids, to perform general building and construction materials for city and other governmental projects.

Clemence Brostowitz, Route 4, has applied for a license to carry milk from the towns of Sigel, Rudolph and Sherry in Wood county, to the Sigel cheese factory, and to carry other farm products from the towns named to points within 35 miles of the applicant's residence in Sigel, as well as supplies from those points to farmers in the towns named.

The Hub City Jobbing company of Marshfield has applied for an amendment to their license, to permit them to carry property for the Wendt Produce company, Marshfield, from Milwaukee to that city.

'MORE REALISM, LESS UTOPIA IN POST-WAR PLANS'

Detroit—(AP)—Jobs, permanent peace and "two-way" international economic relations were cited today by Alfred P. Sloan Jr., chairman of General Motors, as post-war "musts" that can be attained if industry prepares realistically now to meet its responsibilities with the return of peace.

Addressing a luncheon meeting of the Economic club of Detroit, Sloan asserted that "in the general discussion now taking place about what is to happen after the war there is far too much Utopia—too little realism."

He referred to what he described as two approaches to post-war problems—"stratagems planning which attacks the problem from the top and is the planning of the spenders, and sea level planning which attacks it from the bottom and is the realistic approach." He described the sea level planning as "the planning of the producers." Its foundation, he said "is the great force of individual initiative—the keystone of our system of free enterprise."

Noting that a period of great business activity has followed all conflicts, Sloan said: "Predicts Great Activity
 "All the circumstances point to a repetition of this pattern at the end of the present conflict, but on a greatly intensified scale. Assuming the war continues until the end of 1944, it is estimated that wartime savings of individuals will be about $100,000,000,000. A considerable part of this will be in liquid assets."

"Consumer indebtedness will have been largely liquidated so that the reservoir of installment purchasing power will be refilled. Similar accumulations by business and industrial corporations are estimated to add $30,000,000,000 more. Superimposed upon all this there will be in all likelihood a foreign demand resulting from the same fundamental cause—the shortages—plus destruction resulting from the war, the amount of effective demand being limited, however, by the nature of the economic settlements of the war and the ability of other nations to buy, or our willingness to give."

The real problem of the period of shortages, Sloan went on, "will be to control the inflationary influences of an abnormal reservoir of purchasing power in the face of what will be at first extreme shortages of consumer goods."

Discussing what might be done to minimize the effect of employment of the transition from war to peace production and the later transition from the period of shortages to the long-range problems of the years ahead, Sloan said:
 "Back to Private Enterprise
 "Undoubtedly the most dramatic attack on both these problems would be a governmental pronouncement of the nation's firm belief in competitive enterprise and the profit motive as the keystone of the na-

Brave, Gay White-Haired Little Woman Is Key to Argentine Modernism

Buenos Aires—(AP)—Nearly sixty years ago conservative Buenos Aires was scandalized when pretty young Elvira Rawson demanded entrance to the College of Medicine, over the protests of her parents, society, the newspapers, the courts and the university officials. Today, after 55 years of doctoring, fighting for women's rights and causing raised eyebrows, Dr. Elvira Rawson de Dellepiani says she's just begun to fight.

Dr. Dellepiani passed some of her own revolutionary instincts to her motherless nephew whom she raised along with 10 children of her own. The nephew is General Arturo Rawson, co-leader of the June 4th revolution and Argentine president for two days. Of the general she says "He's a good boy." However, she indicates that had she been in his place when he headed the revolutionary government, she would have taken advantage of her authority to put into effect Argentina's democratic desires.

Was Medical Missionary
 Pink-cheeked, white-haired Dr. Dellepiani fought smallpox plagues when vaccination and the isolation of patients were unknown. As a medical inspector in both the hygiene and education departments, she battled corruption and convention. With equal aplomb she attacked the church, the state and society in a country where women who work are generally considered on the lower rungs of the social ladder.

Despite her army ties (all her brothers, uncles, father and nephews chose military careers) Dr. Dellepiani is not entirely in accord with the policies of the present military government.

"The people are wholly pro-allied," she said, and regard with shame their government's hesitation in carrying out its promises. Unfortunately there are some pro-Nazis in Argentina."

Lisbon Looks Like a Capital at War

Lisbon—(AP)—Portugal's program of civil defense exercises reached such size and realism over the week-end that Lisbon newspapers wrote articles to calm the populace while in Madrid rumors were abroad that the Portuguese soon would go to war at the side of the allies.

While it was stressed here that Portugal had not changed her policy of neutrality, the populace was warned that the civil defense exercises were a serious business. Lisbon itself looked somewhat like a capital at war. Windows bore criss-crossed anti-shatter strips and air raid wardens patrolled the roofs.

Dr. Dellepiani admires North American women because "they make their own decisions and have a long tradition of independence." Although her step isn't as springy as it was years ago when she jumped off her porch in Mendoza to run after a wounded fugitive so she could handage his wounds, Dr. Dellepiani refused to grow old at home. She loves to excite her friends with her iconoclastic opinions. "The people I visit seem to think an old woman with white hair should not go around saying shocking things. But my spirit won't let me keep from saying what I believe," she says.

Chiang Tells Two Goals of China

Chungking—(AP)—The twin goals of Chinese external and domestic policy are cooperating with the United Nations to defeat the Axis and the creation of a constitutional government for China, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek declared yesterday when he took the oath of office as president of the 32nd anniversary of the founding of the Republic. The actual inauguration ceremony took place in the morning before an assembly of 400 of China's highest officials.

Name Liberty Ship After Ex-Governor

Washington—(AP)—The late William D. Hoard sr., who was elected governor of Wisconsin in 1883, will be honored soon when a Liberty ship bearing his name is launched at an Oregon shipyard, the maritime commission has announced.

Hoard founded the Hoard's Dairyman, a national farm magazine, and also published weekly newspapers at Lake Mills and Fort Atkinson, present home of the Hoard Publishing Co.

Another craft will bear the name of Peter White, who aided in the development of Marquette, Mich., as an iron ore port.
