Truman Seeks End of Steel Strike

Legion Demands Bradley Ouster as Vet Official

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The American Legion congressional investigation of the Veterans administration under Gen. Omar N. Bradley and his replacement by a "sensored businessman."

The Legion's national commander, John Steele, accused Bradley of failure to utilize all available hospital beds and said there was a "traumatic breakdown" in processing of veterans claims and mail.

It is apparent that the great promise of our government to the returning veteran... is not being fulfilled," Steele said in asking the investigation in letters to members of congress.

Bradley has been in office less than six months. He was called by President Truman from command of the 12th army group in Europe after a congressional probe of VA that is still to be wound up.

The house committee on veterans legislation is currently writing its verdict on charges of malpractice in Veterans hospitals. Bradley's first effort was to revamp the medical program.

The Legion's blast punctured a six-months "honeymoon" in which all veterans organizations had backed Bradley in his announced effort to overhaul the agency.

Boost Sugar Prices
Stabilization Administration John C. Collet announced Friday that the retail ceiling price of sugar will be increased one-half cent a pound shortly. The action results from a recent half-cent a pound increase in the refinery price of sugar.

Can See Atom Blasts
Foreign observers may be allowed to witness U. S. atomic bomb experiments on ships but they will have no opportunity to get any information of technical or scientific value, army and navy officers agreed Friday.

Officers familiar with the planning said that the experiments are allowed to attend the tests, would be placed under the same restrictions proposed for correspondents, commentators, photographers and other observers from the United States.

All will be allowed to view the bomb's blast at Bikini atoll in the Pacific from a safe distance. But there are no plans to allow anyone to go to the lagoon and probe around the ships after the bomb has been dropped and resultant radioactivity has dissipated.

This does not mean that the observers will be given no glimpse of the bombed ships. Officers explained that a "general" view of the bomb's damage probably would be given them several days afterward.

Pappy Adds His Bit
Sen. W. (Pappy) Lee O'Daniel, D. Tex., Friday described legislation to create a permanent fair employment practice commission as "this nefarious, communistic brain-absorbance No. 101."

The smooth-voiced former radio crooner replaced Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo, D. Miss., in the southern Democratic filibuster against FEPC. He said the present senate situation reminded him of what went on back home in Texas when gophers were about.

"You can't see gophers," he said. "They work underground. But when you see one for the first time, you know they're there. That's the way it is in the senate. You see the dirt moving. And you know the Communist backers are there."

Ickes Opposes Pauley
Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes testified Friday that Edwin W. Pauley once told him California oil men would contribute large sums to the Democratic party if Ickes dropped a suit for federal title to oil-bearing tidelands.

Ickes testified before the senate naval affairs committee which is studying Pauley's nomination to be undersecretary of navy.

Speaker Sam Rayburn, D. Tex., also testified about Pauley's interest in the tidelands. He said Pauley had an assistant attorney general of California, to visit him. Clary supported legislation to give the states title to tidelands.

Alpine Troops Help Hunt Missing Plane

ELK MOUNTAIN, Wyo.—(AP)—Fifty army troops and other mountain climbers, using skis, snowshoes and sleds, joined Friday in another attempt to scale the treacherous 11,125-foot Elk mountain where 21 persons were believed to have perished in the crash of a United air lines Mainliner. It was the second party which had tried to scale the snow-capped mountain peak, where the temperature is below zero and the driving snow blinds the searchers.

The first group was forced to descend, after climbing to within 600 yards of the towering peak without sighting the wreckage. Army alpine troops then were recruited at Fort Warren, Wyo., to join the search.

First Party Turns Back
Under Sheriff John Terrill of Rawlins said a "terrible blizzard" had halted the first party's progress as it neared the top of the 11,125-foot peak. "Only a man over six feet tall, described the snow as 'about waist deep.'"

United air line officials in Cheyenne said a company plane would attempt an aerial canvass of the fog-shrouded mountain top, if weather conditions permitted.

Col. E. F. Borsuki, Fort Warren commanding officer, warned that "it might take until June" to find the wreckage if heavy snowfalls covered the plane and bodies.

The ship, carrying 12 soldiers, six civilians and three crew members, received a routine progress report from Fort Sinclair, Wyo., at 2:40 a. m. (MST) Thursday and was not heard from again.

Picked Up Newlyweds
The plane had been flying from Seattle to New York and made its last stop at Boise, Ida., where it picked up Mr. and Mrs. George A. Bender en route to their home in Sheffield, Ill., after their wedding two days before. It had been due in Denver at 4:20 a. m. (MST).

A heavy fog hid the mountain top from the searchers. The faces of anxious persons waiting at the foot for news of the plane and possible survivors. The Cheyenne weather bureau estimated that temperatures were about eight below during the night on the peak.

In addition to the Benders, the passenger list included Robert S. Pirie, New York and Chicago salesman; H. R. Glover, Vancouver, Wash.; Mrs. E. H. Blake, Richland, Wash.; and William Petracek, New York.

Walter P. Briggs, veteran airline pilot, was captain of the ship. First officer was Harry M. Atlas and the stewardess, Dorothy Carter, 22, All were based in Portland.

Names of the servicemen were withheld pending notification of next-of-kin.

NUERNBERG, (AP)—Adolf Hitler was mute and deaf for several weeks after the attempt to assassinate him on July 20, 1944, Marshal Wilhelm Keitel was revealed Friday a tavern companion that "the job ought to be worth at least $20,000."

Police said a photograph of the man in custody would be sent to Sheboygan, where the waitress now is serving a 30-day sentence on a vagrancy charge. If she identifies the photograph, they said, she will be brought here to face the man.

Police picked up Desere Smet, 35, a janitor who previously had been questioned in the case, after Miss Williams first made her statement to Sheboygan police two weeks ago. He was released however when she was unable to identify him.

Soviet Demands British Get Out of Greece Now

LONDON—(AP)—Trygve Lie, Norwegian foreign minister, was elected secretary general of the U.N.O. Friday by a vote of 46 to 3.

Hear Greek Controversy
LONDON—(AP)—Soviet Delegate Andrei Vishinsky told the United Nations security council Friday that the U.S. "insists on the speedy and unconditional withdrawal of British forces from Greece."

In a cold dispassionate denunciation of Britain's policy in Greece, Vishinsky said that the presence of British troops in that country was "entirely unjustified."

He said Greece was threatening the new-found peace of Europe and the British were helping Greek monarchist factions create a "reign of terror."

British Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin rose immediately to challenge the Russian delegate's remarks and said bluntly that he believed the situation as interpreted by Vishinsky called for more rather than fewer British troops in Greece.

Need More—Not Less
Vishinsky's long speech about the "terror" in Greece and the lack of law and order, Bevin said ironically, "points not to a necessity for withdrawal of British troops but to the imperative necessity for putting more there."

Bevin opened his defense of British policy by admitting the Soviets had brought up the question many times, but always as a counter-attack by the Russians whenever we discussed other parts of Europe.

He said Generalissimo Stalin was satisfied with the British explanation given during the talks conference and quoted Stalin as saying he had complete confidence in the British policy in Greece.

Vishinsky spoke for more than an hour in presenting the Russian demand for prompt withdrawal of the British from Greece.

He said he had no quarrel with the fact that the fleet was based at Pearl Harbor, however. He said the fleet received excellent training under the system set up there.

Rep. Bertrand W. Gearhart, R. Calif., asked Smith for his opinion as to what would have happened if the fleet hadn't been in Pearl Harbor.

"Had the fleet been on the Pacific coast I do not believe Japan would have attacked in the manner that she did at Pearl Harbor," Smith replied.

"It is ridiculous to believe that such a force could have approached San Pedro without detection. There is a lot of merchant shipping in the area. Some one would have detected it."

"They would have had to refuel three times on the way over and the same number of times on the way back."

"I do not believe any intelligent enemy would attack the fleet on the west coast and leave Hawaii as a place from which it could be hit on the way back."

"I believe Japan would have taken Oahu or one of the other islands in an amphibious operation and it is my belief they could have done it."

He said it would have been comparatively easy for Japan to have taken one of the less-populated islands of the Hawaiian group and attacked Pearl Harbor from there.

He added the opinion that Japan would have inflicted more damage on the United States in the Pearl Harbor raid if the attacking planes had knocked out oil supplies and machine shops at the base.

Says U. S. Had Ample Warning of Jap Plan
WASHINGTON—(AP)—Navy Capt. I. F. Safford said Friday the war and navy departments in Washington had 72 hours advance notice of the Pearl Harbor attack from the Japanese themselves.

He based his statement on firm belief that Japan did send a so-called "winds code" message which was intercepted on Dec. 4, 1941, indicating an impending break in relations with the United States.

Other material in the hands of the War and Navy departments in Washington, he said, pointed to Pearl Harbor as the spot of the first attack.

Safford, who was chief of the Navy department's communications section in December, 1941, made his statements to the congressional Pearl Harbor investigation committee.

He was one of the few naval officers in Washington who knew of the "winds code" which Japan meant to use to break diplomatic relations with the United States, Great Britain or Russia.

Previous witnesses before the committee have denied knowledge that the winds code ever was used. It meant war—some knew it.

Doubts Jap Blow on Coastal Base
WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Pearl Harbor committee heard from Navy Capt. I. F. Safford Friday that the Navy department ordered communications officers to keep their mouths shut and destroy any notes they had regarding events of the Pearl Harbor weekend.

Approved Fleet in Hawaii
WASHINGTON—(AP)—Vice Adm. W. W. Smith, former chief of staff of the Pacific fleet, said Friday he believed Japan would not have attacked the fleet on the west coast as it did at Pearl Harbor.

Smith gave his opinion to the congressional Pearl Harbor committee as an "amateur strategist."

He said he had no quarrel with the fact that the fleet was based at Pearl Harbor, however. He said the fleet received excellent training under the system set up there.

Rep. Bertrand W. Gearhart, R. Calif., asked Smith for his opinion as to what would have happened if the fleet hadn't been in Pearl Harbor.

Screen Star Makes Rounds of Favorite College Day Haunts

Even the sun shone briefly on Dennis Morgan Friday to welcome home the handsome movie actor who received an honorary degree of doctor of fine arts from Carroll college, climaxing a celebration of the school's 100th anniversary.

The actor who 15 years ago won a place in the heart of the city through his performances in Carroll plays and by singing, was home again to be honored by the school which he left in 1930.

It was a gala occasion as he and Naval Commander Gwilym Davies, Waukesha doctor who served three years in the navy, were handed honorary degrees by President G. Vander Lugt and then sipped hoochies of achievement draped around their necks.

President Morgan and Davies "Stan Mover" that he is the first member of a class since 1928 to be so honored. President Vander Lugt stated he has known "Stan" for many years and that "no words of mine can add to the reputation you have won and the honor which you have brought to Carroll college. You have distinguished yourself in new media, the radio and motion pictures and have won great renown on the concert stage."

Of Commander Davies, President Vander Lugt said he had distinguished himself in three separate though related fields of endeavor. He served in foreign mission hospitals of French Guinea with untiring service, he served with distinction as a physician for Carroll college besides establishing an outstanding record as a Waukesha practitioner and since his enlistment in the navy in 1945 served in the USS Pennsylvania.

Morgan's Dine at Goff's
Waukesha's bobby soxers, on the trail of Screen Star Dennis Morgan Friday afternoon during his rounds of college day haunts, continued the sleet signing, "What a hunk of a man."

Following quiet services in the Presbyterian church in the morning, Morgan and his party of 21, including his wife, Lillian, dined at Goff's restaurant and posed for photographs.

From Goff's the party went to Mike Zoller's Sweet shop on South street where Dennis jerked sodas for several co-eds just as he did some 15 years ago. For the benefit of the photos he attempted to throw a scoop of ice cream in the air and catch it in a malted mixing container but the ice cream stuck and the trick was abandoned.

"Swell" to be Back
The Novelty Cleaning co., a few doors down the street, was the next stop and here Morgan and his party pressed broadsides and other promotional shots in the police station with Chief Harold Owens and the boys, more pictures were taken on the Carroll campus and at the Park theater.

Contrary to plans, there was no direct radio broadcast of the church services Friday morning but according to broadcast was made and this was to go on the air over ABC stations between 4 and 4:30 p. m. this afternoon.

To questions, "How does it feel to be back in Waukesha?" he beamed broadly and replied, "Swell." He shook hands with hundreds of his old friends during the day and posed for pictures at the drop of the hat, explaining it was all in the life of a screen star.

Tonight Morgan will be the center of interest in the college gymnasium where the alumni will serve a dinner to about 800 persons.

Union Here Not in Labor Strife

A strike affecting 10 plants and 30,000 employees of the International Harvester co. in the Chicago area is not expected to have any effect upon operations of the malleable iron foundry here which was taken over Friday by that company.

According to a Harvester official, which incorporated both the aluminum and grey iron foundries of the United Steel Workers union (CIO).

The change-over from General Malleable corp. to Harvester co. control here was made without incident at the Perkins ave. plant. Key Harvester officials occupied places in the organization, at the time retaining most of the personnel which had previously been employed by General Malleable.

L. D. Harclerod, president of General Malleable, said Friday the split-up left his organization with slightly more than 200 employees who are located at the old Ford plant.

Peace negotiations in Chicago having failed, the CIO strike at Harvester in Chicago entered its 12th day. A presidential fact-finding panel resumed its hearing Thursday.

Meanwhile, a strike called by the same union against the Caterpillar Tractor company at Peoria, which has prevented 17,500 employees from working, continuing strike lessened.

The strike in Peoria started Tuesday when negotiations on the plant wage increase, a closed shop and other contract provisions broke down.

The Harvester plants manufacturing all types of farm machinery, industrial machines, tractors, grading equipment, and crawler type tractors made by the Caterpillar company.

Calls Bowles to Washington for Saturday Talks

By United Press
The number of strike- idled U. S. workers edged over the 1,500,000 mark Friday as President Truman scheduled a conference with Price Administrator Chester Bowles, reportedly to consider the nationwide steel strike.

Meantime, the deadlocked steel industry wage dispute brought further work cutbacks to related industries, hampered by a growing shortage of steel products.

Mr. Truman summoned Bowles back from a South Carolina vacation for the conference at the White House Saturday. Washington observers expressed belief that possible steel price increases would be discussed.

The U. S. Steel corp., principal target in the 12-day strike, has contended that wages can not be raised 18 1/2 cents an hour, as proposed by the president, unless prices can be increased much more than the $4 a ton suggested by Reconversion Director John W. Snyder.

President Truman scheduled a conference for late Friday with his steel fact-finding panel, which has been gathering cost-wage-earnings data.

New Bill is Offered
A liberal Democrat Friday proposed a new compromise bill to a house apparently determined to enact legislation on present strikes in the reconversion period.

The compromise, a new version of fact-finding legislation proposed by President Truman, was introduced by Rep. Jerry Voorhis, D., Calif. He recommended it as a better solution of labor-management strife than the sweeping measure introduced Thursday by Rep. Francis Case, R., S. D.

Unlike Case's measure, the Voorhis bill proposes no penalties against unions. It would, however, provide for a 30-day cooling-off period, as would the Case bill and the original Truman plan.

The Voorhis and Case bills both were offered as substitutes for a watered-down version of the original fact-finding measure which was approved by the house labor committee.

Other Labor Front News
In the major labor developments: 1. President Truman asked the court to prevent seizure of the steel industry, although President Philip Murray of the CIO Steel Workers' union had stated flatly that settlement of the wage-price dispute "is now up to the president."

2. CIO United Auto Workers and the strikebound General Motors Corp. agreed to settle minor contract differences before tackling their wage dispute.

3. The "Big Five" meat packing companies told a presidential fact-finding board that they must be permitted to raise prices if wage increases are granted to 300,000 CIO and AFL packing house workers.

4. Danger of an Ohio utilities strike lessened, as a new effort started Tuesday when negotiations on the plant wage increase, a closed shop and other contract provisions broke down.
