A SICK BAY SAILOR is an individual who suddenly becomes sick at the very mention of hard work. He desires to evade toil, but at the same time wants it to look official. Hence he is happiest when his name is on the binnacle list-a list of men who are slightly sick and have to perform only light duty. Different pharmacist's mates, however, have different conceptions of "slightly sick." In: some cases you get light duty for' a sore throat-in others, it takes,
