

Miss Jean W. Urban Is Bride of LeRoy Hesse

In St. Joseph's Cathedral at San Diego, Calif., on Saturday morning, May 29, Miss Jean W. Urban, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer J. Urban of Wisconsin Rapids exchanged nuptial vows with Pfc. LeRoy F. Hesse of San Diego, son of Mrs. Henry Hesse, also of this city. The Rev. Arthur Gleason read the ceremony preceding an 8 o'clock mass.

Organ music included the beautiful "Ave Maria," "On This Day" and "O Lord I Am Not Worthy". The bride was wearing a street dress of powder blue panorama mesh with a large lace-like picture hat and accessories in white. An orchid shoulderette completed her costume.

Private Hesse is stationed with the United States marines at Jacques Farm, Camp Elliott, and his bride has resumed her employment in the county treasurer's office at the Wood County court house. Both were graduated from Lincoln high school, he with the class of '29 and she with the class of '35.

May Silent On Probe of WAAC Rumors

Washington—(P)—Chairman May (D-Ky.) of the house military committee refused today to confirm or deny a published report that a sub-committee had been named to investigate rumors reflecting on the morality of the Women's Auxiliary Army corps.

"I don't know anything about it," said May, after first declining altogether to comment, "and if I did, I would be too much of a gentleman to say so."

However, it was learned that some members of the military committee conferred informally with Oveta Culp Hobby, WAAC director, and other war department officials following a published report—since officially denied—that contraceptives were to be issued the women soldiers.

Declining use of his name, one of the committee members said, he knew of no formal inquiry and declared he was satisfied that the reports were groundless.

By RUTH MILLETT

Things are going to be different when you get home, George.

The little woman says so. She has it all figured out. And she has had plenty of time to figure since you went into the service and left her to live alone.

She has decided you were right and she was wrong about a lot of things, George.

About the Joneses, for instance. They bored you both to death, yet you saw them regularly. Somehow, it just got to be a habit. And when you complained, your wife always explained that you had to have them to dinner because they had asked you to dinner.

That explanation makes sense to women—but it never made sense to you. It doesn't make sense to your wife any more. Every time she thinks of the perfectly good evenings that went to waste because you had to go to the Joneses or they came to your house—she could weep. There aren't going to be any more evenings like that. The little woman has promised that to herself.

And those afternoons when she used to play bridge with "the girls" until so late she had to feed you cold cuts for dinner. No more of those meals for you, George.

She thinks now that having a man come home hungry at night would be such a joy that in the future she intends always to beat you home by two hours. Plenty of time to cook a good meal and have it on the table five minutes after you walk through the door.

NOT A HOTEL

And all those house guests. You always maintained that a home should be a man's castle—not a hotel run on a non-profit plan. She has decided you were right. When you get home you are going to have a right to veto any invitations before they are sent out.

Does all that sound too good to be true, George? Well, the little woman swears it isn't.

She says that she and a lot of other wives are just discovering that their husbands knew more about living than their wives ever gave them credit for.

That is the straight dope, George. Come home as soon as you can and see how things (including the little woman) have changed.

Lovely Speaking Voice Is a Genuine Attribute to Charm

BY ALICIA HART

Nothing can more surely win you a reputation for charm than a lovely speaking voice. You may spend hours on the care of your complexion and figure, yet ruin the whole effect when you begin to talk.

It may well be that you've never really heard yourself. Then have a recording made, or hold a piece of cardboard in front of your mouth to act as a sounding board and cup your ear while you read something out of the newspaper.

If your voice is resonant, the tones beautiful and the diction perfect, don't read another line of this. But if you detect a nasal, high-pitched quality, here are a few suggestions to improve your voice:

Correct your breathing by lying flat on your back for five minutes each morning and breathing deeply. After a few weeks you'll find that you'll naturally breathe all the way down to your ribs while standing. Try putting your hand over your diaphragm while doing your deep breathing. If you can feel it moving, then you're on the right road.

Most of us are lip-lazy. Just watch people when they talk and you'll be surprised how few use their lips to form the words. As a result their speech is muffled. Yawning voluntarily several times before you begin your reading exercise will relax your jaw, help eliminate flat tones, and break your tight-tipped habit.

Humming is also an excellent means to correct a nasal quality. Breathe deeply and hum a low note slowly for as long as you can. Now, keeping all these points in mind, read aloud as often as you can.

Beauty masks and milk baths were favorites of the Roman ladies.
